The '76 House America's Oldest Tavern

Built with the founding of Tappan (1686) and expanded in 1755 to accommodate the town's need to provide hospitality to stagecoach travelers. The 76 House is America's oldest tavern. It was within these venerable walls that the Dutch town fathers, a group naturally predisposed to separate themselves from England, gathered to draft and sign The Resolutions of Orangetown on July 4, 1774, a document which stands as one of America's first declarations of independence.

It was this fiercely independent spirit which caused the English army not only to take control of New York but also to expand their presence up the Hudson Valley. To thwart this surge the Colonials fortified what is now known as West Point, a situation which placed Tappan at the front line of the War for Independence. This led every general in the Continental army and many of our founding fathers to the '76 House: Hamilton, Green, Van Buren, Lafayette, Anthony Wayne, Lord Sterling, Gen. Glover, Tallmadge, Knox, Von Steuben and, of course, Washington – just to name a few.

In fact it was Washington's presence at the 76 House which caused Major Andre's captors to bring the infamous spy and collaborator with Benedict Arnold to Tappan for trial and eventual execution. Andre became the first aristocrat hanged by colonists, an event which reshaped our war of independence.

The next time Washington was to visit the 76 House it was to for a contentious meeting with Sir Guy Carlton, who after days of negotiation tendered the plans of the British evacuation and on behalf of Great Britain, recognized America as a free and independent nation for the first time in our history. A 17-gun salute in the waters off Tappan-by-the-sea (now Piermont) confirmed America's independence. May 4, 1783
